One of the principal objects of the proposed organization is to secure more uniform specifications ithroughout the entire state. Many specifications, as now drawn, force hardships upon the contractor and extra expense upon the property owners, because of obsolete clauses which the contractors feel can be readily eliminated by organized effort. Most municipal work is conducted under supervision of officials who are being constantly changed because of political preferment. The average tenure of office of the city official having charge of public improvements is too short to enable him to. become experienced in this line of work and also put into effect changes which experience may deem ad visa ble. The municipal contractors alone continue constantly employed in improvement work, but individually they are enabled to accomplish but little, while through an organization they expect to be able to accomplish much. As a...
