FIELD CLUB.--This Society is trying the experiment of furnishing lecturers on scientific subjects for the towns and larger villages of the county. A committee has been appointed for the purpose of making the necessary arrangements, Mr. Arthur Ransom acting as chairman, and Mr. J. Hamson as secretary. A scheme has been prepared by the Committee and adopted by the Society, providing that upon proper application to the secretary of the Lecture Committee, a lecturer may be supplied. It requires that the lectures shall be brief, popular, and, as far as possible, practical, and it is suggested that objects of the county would be the most proper subjects to expatiate upon. The lecturers are to give their services gratuitously, but the applicants are required to defray all expenses incurred for travelling, refreshments, experiments, etc. The secretary was instructed to send circulars, explanatory of this offer and the terms, to the clergy, chairmen of school boards, schoolmasters, secretaries of local institutes, temperance societies, etc., in the county. A list has been drawn up of the names of gentlemen who are prepared with suitable papers, and upon receiving an application, the secretary negotiates for the subject and date, etc. At present the project is in its initiatory stage, and but two or three lectures have been given under it. It is perhaps premature to form any opinions as to the success of this undertaking, but so far the number of applications has by no means realised the hopes...
