Excerpt: . . . Liberals, both in politics and in theology, and I asked whether the same could be said of the present generation of undergraduates. In reply, he told me, doubtless with some exaggeration, that the opinions of the undergraduates are in chronic opposition to those of their tutors. It takes about twenty years for a budding student to grow into a full-blown don. Whence it follows that there are cycles of about forty years, during half of which the University rises in Liberalism, while during the other half it falls; or rather, the dons and the undergraduates are at the opposite ends of an intellectual seesaw, so that while the former are rising the latter are falling, and vice versa. When you were at Oxford, he said to me, all the good men were Liberals; they couldnt help it. But now it is all changed. Many of the able undergraduates are Conservative; and those of an original turn take up JEstheticism ! One who was his pupil in 1850 writes: --In my own case, the greatest piece of intellectual insight he showed was in persuading me to give up Natural Science as my main pursuit. You care for the literature of science, and for the results of science; you dont really care for science itself. You read Bacon and Herschels Introduction, and the Vestiges, and Humboldts Cosmos; but you dont come into chapel with the mud of Shotover and the railway cuttings sticking to your knees....
