Millennium Press, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Dr. Stephen Lampe argues that to think about God is not a matter of religion. It is simply to follow the natural yearning that is implanted in the human essence. Thus, the search for the right conception of God is everybody's duty. Dr. Lampe's original approach and explanations amount to a paradigm shift in the debate about God. He introduces knowledge that has been lacking in the numerous publications on the idea of God and discusses clearly and directly various conceptions and misconceptions of God, thereby providing unusually rich food for thought for believers as well as atheists. The book rouses the individual believer to re-examine the extent to which his or her faith has a sound basis. After reading this book academic philosophers and theologians will all have to rethink their approaches and arguments for or against the existence and the nature of God. And atheists will be particularly embarrassed at the all too obvious shallowness of their strongest arguments in the light of Stephen Lampe's elucidation. Stephen Lampe argues that to ask if a person believes in God is meaningless in the absence of a clear elaboration of the nature and attributes of God the questioner has in mind. And any response that does not specify the attributes is certainly trivial. It follows that nothing is gained from the general arguments about belief in God. Dr. Lampe shows convincingly that mystery and revelations are real; they are encountered in all endeavours including in scientific research. Stephen Lampe asks: How can we think rightly about the invisible God if we do not know what we are and why we exist on earth? He...
