These relations suggested that crustal structures localized deformation, magmatism, and hydrothermal activity repeatedly over the complex Phanerozoic tectonic history of the region. They also prompted the following questions: How did mineral belts in the Great Basin originate and evolve through time What role did the crystalline basement, terrigenous detrital sequence, carbonate sequence, and magmas play in the genesis of ore fluids How did older structural features in these belts influence later episodes of mineralization Were gold and other elements recycled How do the mineral belts and deposits in this metallogenic province compare to those in other parts of the world To address these questions we needed: ( 1 ) high-quality framework information ( geologic, geophysical, geochemical ), which was readily available for the Great Basin; ( 2 ) a medium in which to interpret a variety of data sets ( Geographic Information System GIS and relational databases ); ( 3 ) 2-and 3-D geologic reconstructions for major episodes of mineral deposit...
