United States Navy officer, Ensign Thorp Karnin, meets a beautiful French woman named Genevieve Blondin in Naples, Italy. Genevieves on vacation, while Thorps ship, the USS Spencer, has just docked in port. Captivated by her beauty and charm, they take a quick trip to Capri before his ship leaves port. The two decide to meet up at his next free port in The Mediterranean. The lovers meet again in Cannes, France, but Thorps ship again goes to sea. Genevieve attempts to keep up her good spirits, but senses that she is pregnant with Thorps child. She loses hope as news spreads of the USS Spencers collision with a British merchant ship. The crash results in serious damage and many lives lost. The USS Spencer barely makes it to the port in Gibraltar, where Thorp writes to Genevieve countless times. Before he can find his love in Cannes, Genevieve turns to drastic measures that will change her life and their relationship forever. While Genevieve is fiction, Brocks experiences in the United States Navy are not. He hopes to entertain readers with the...
